"We're thrilled to be recognized for our innovative career and talent development work in the oil and gas industry," said Bram Lowsky, Group EVP, Americas, Right Management. "Today, the industry is confronting structural changes on all fronts. The state of uncertainty in the industry has made managing talent while driving business outcomes a complex and difficult task, and being recognized for helping companies navigate such challenging times is a very special honor for us."

Right Management's consulting services for the oil and gas industry include delivering practical solutions in the areas of leadership and career development, assessment and succession planning and outplacement. The oil and gas industry is facing significant talent gaps as it confronts major shifts in workforce demographics. This requires innovative talent and career management approaches to help companies succeed in an industry dealing with change and uncertainty. As more businesses right-size their organizations and realign their talent to compete in the global marketplace, Right Management understands the unique challenges the oil and gas industry faces and supports organizations to effectively manage talent while driving agility, business outcomes and competitiveness.
